Adam Foutz

Adam Foutz (1841-1911), a native of Adams County, PA, enlisted in Company K of the 190th PA Regiment. His military career ended on a sour note when he was found guilty of desertion and sentenced to serve for as much time as he had been missing on top the time he had originally enlisted for. This ended his military career with a year of hard labor and a dishonorable discharge. He returned to Adams County and married Catherine “Kate” Klingel of Mt. Joy Township. She was known as the mother of the college. They had four children, all of whom died in infancy. Foutz worked as a custodian and janitor of Pennsylvania College (now Gettysburg College) for most of the remained of his life and retired on a pension
