

JCCT In the Classroom Discussion

Friday, November 6th

3:30 - 4:40

Breidenbaugh 311

"Dehumanized"

The Johnson Center for Creative Teaching will host a wine and cheese discussion led by retired colleague Professor Lou Hamman. He will be examining an article that recently appeared in Harper's Magazine written by Mark Slouka, a contributing editor at Harper's and author of the novel The Visible World entitled "Dehumanized." The piece addresses what the author sees as the creeping disappearance of the humanities in colleges and universities. Instead, to Slouka's mind, the market determines the curriculum.

The Advisory Board of the Johnson Center for Creative Teaching hopes to have a lively discussion, and to this end, we hope that you will plan on attending. The article will be available to view on Angel next week.

JCCT

<http://www.gettysburg.edu/about/offices/provost/support\_for\_teaching/center\_for\_creativeteaching/>