This talk will be an introduction to spectral graph theory which is the area of research interested in the connections between graphs, various matrices associated with them and the eigenvalues of these matrices. Dr. Cioaba will describe some of these connections, and give examples where progress has been made or solutions are known only through the use of eigenvalues of graphs. He will present open problems in this area that are suitable for undergraduate students.