Gettysburg College invites applications for a full-time Visiting Assistant Professor position in mathematics for the 2016-2017 academic year. Applicants must have a Ph.D. in one of the mathematical sciences, or have completed all requirements except the dissertation for the degree, by September 2016. A record of excellent and innovative teaching, a desire to work in a liberal arts environment, and an active or developing program of mathematical scholarship are essential. Responsibilities for this position include teaching three courses each semester, and additional departmental duties as assigned. The teaching load will most likely include courses from the calculus sequence, and ordinary differential equations. The successful candidate will have the opportunity to influence the mathematics program of an energetic department and to involve students in a variety of mathematical activities outside the classroom.

Please submit a letter of application, a curriculum vitae, a brief description of your teaching methods and objectives, and up to three letters of recommendation addressing teaching effectiveness through mathjobs.org. Review of applications will begin March 1, 2016 and will continue until the position is filled. Inquiries can be addressed to Professor Benjamin Kennedy (bkenndy@gettysburg.edu), Chair, Mathematics Department.
